Investment Process

- Westfield employs a Growth-at-a-Reasonable Price (GARP) approach, seeking companies with underappreciated earnings growth trading at reasonable valuations.
- The team's due diligence process is driven by deep fundamental research in pursuit of what Westfield believes are the best managed, highest quality, and optimally positioned businesses.
- Meeting with company management teams is an integral part of the Westfield's due diligence process; the team meets with hundreds of company managements each quarter. Westfield layers on independent sustainability research to more critically assess opportunities and risks.
- The team applies strict valuation discipline, typically seeking companies with a minimum upside/downside ratio of 2:1.
- A dedicated risk control team is employed throughout the process to ensure appropriate risk management. This includes close monitoring of price targets, downside flag system, factor exposures, and continuously seeking to improve the investment process.
- The Fund's high conviction portfolio of 60 to 80 growth equities is constructed and actively managed by the Investment Committee.

Alpha is a measure of risk (beta)-adjusted return.

Beta is a measure of systematic risk, or the sensitivity of a fund to movements in the benchmark. A beta of 1 implies that the expected movement of a fund's return would match that of the benchmark used to measure beta.

Growth at a reasonable price (GARP) is an equity investment strategy that combines growth and value investing attributes. GARP investors focus on companies with earnings growth above broad market levels but without extremely high valuations.

The upside/downside ratio is a financial metric used to compare the potential for gain (upside) against the potential for loss (downside) in an investment.
